TITAN TRADITION

HARRY AINLAY
COMPOSITE HIGH SCHOOL
1985-86

FOR WAYFARERS STILL JOURNEYING;
FOR WANDERERS AT REST.

*Through empty halls and darkened rooms
No one walks; no sound is heard ...
Yet faint beats of the heart
Are felt; souls cry ... tears fall ...
they quietly fall ...
The snow gently drifts to the ground
And covers the pale, brown earth,
As time covers the pain.
Good-bye, my friend-
Good-bye.*

IN MEMORY OF MR. RAY WEBB

As a student of Mr. Ray Webb's, I learned many things--even some about Social Studies. Despite the fact that Mr. Webb knew his subject well, his greatest gift was teaching. He taught us not only the facts, but also how to learn, how to analyze the facts and make our own decisions, not just memorize a book and believe what we are told. His caring and understanding ran deeper than most. He never gave up the chance to explain a concept twice if someone did not quite understand. He was more upset if people did not hassle him for extra help than if they did.

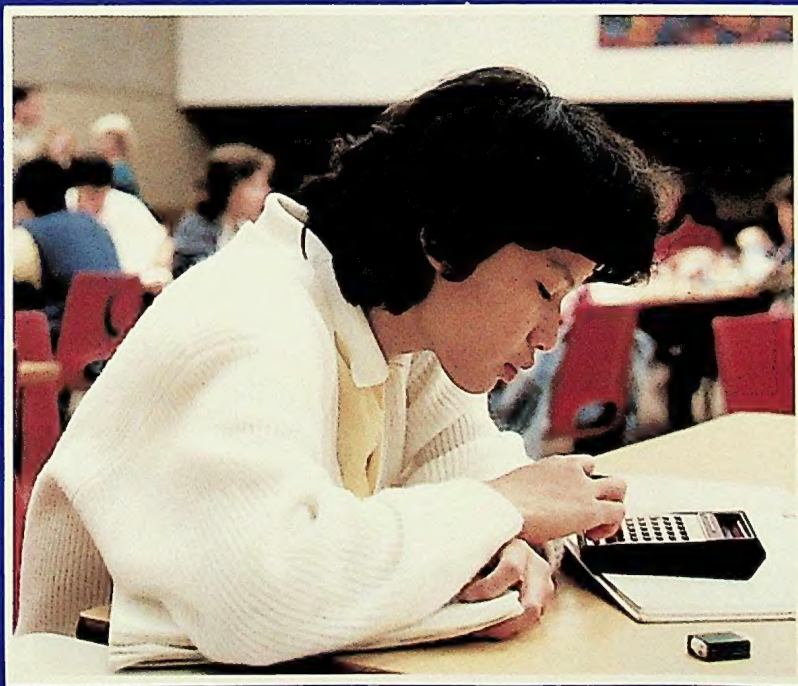

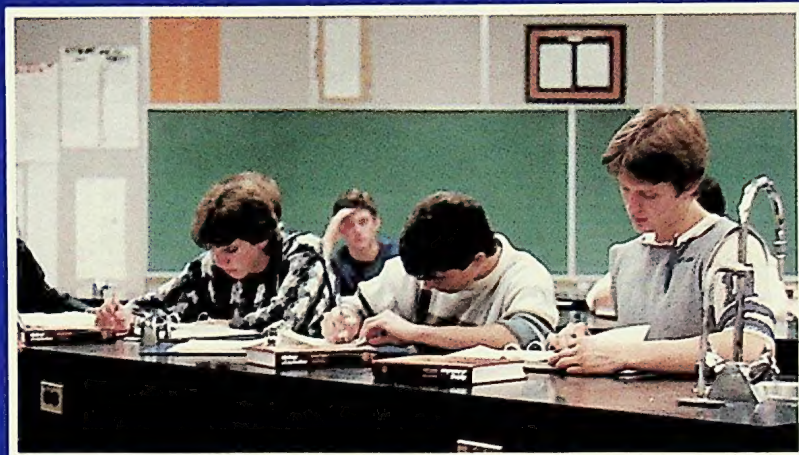

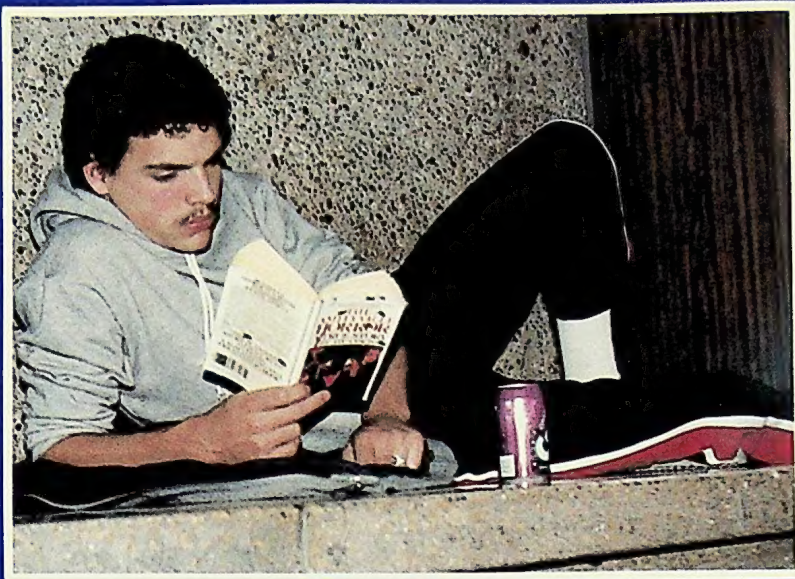

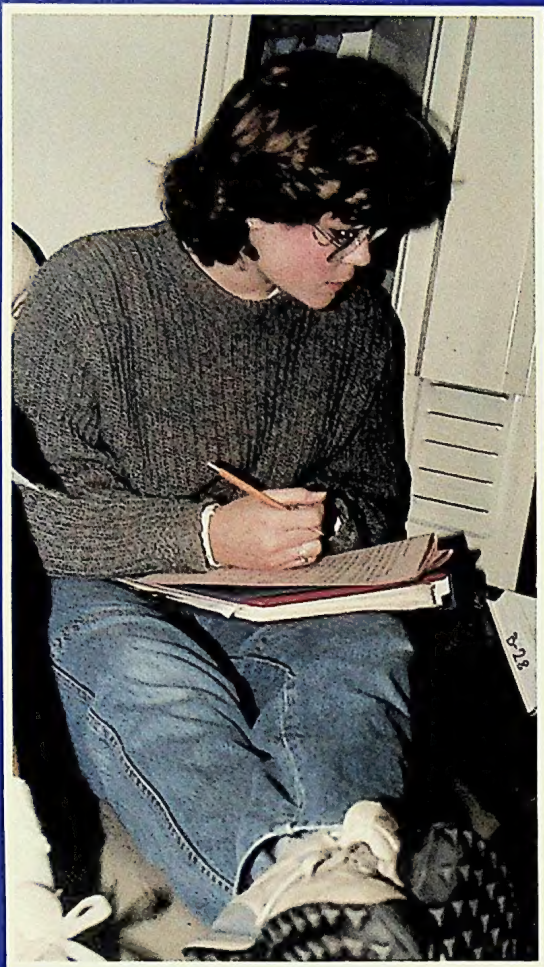

Outside of school, Mr. Webb gave a complete effort to everything he did and expected very little in return, except for the satisfaction of doing his best. Only his love for his family and the outdoors rivaled his love of teaching. His family was the joy of his life. He was, and still remains, a great man.

Mr. Ray Webb: June 14, 1933 to December 2, 1985.

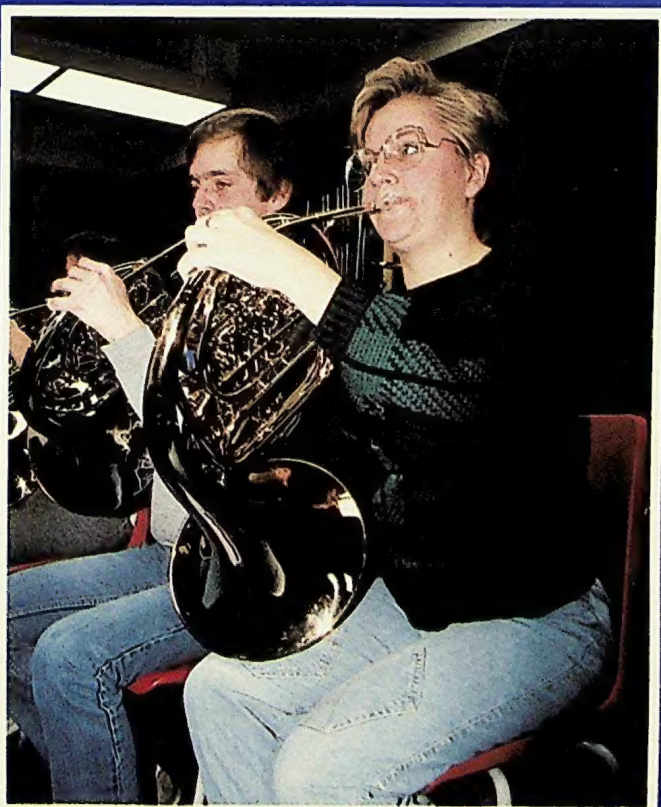

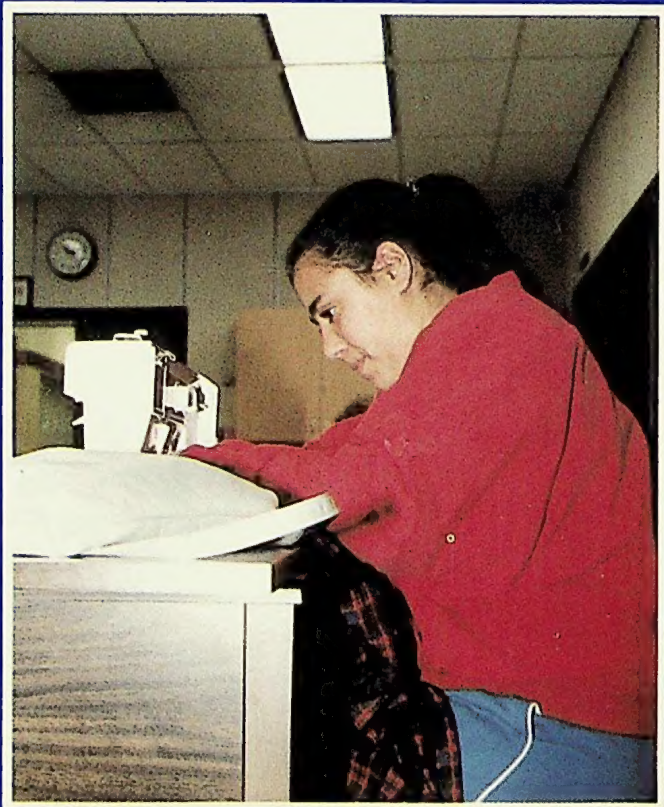

A caring man who will never be forgotten by his friends, students, and colleagues -- may his family continue on with the strength he has left.

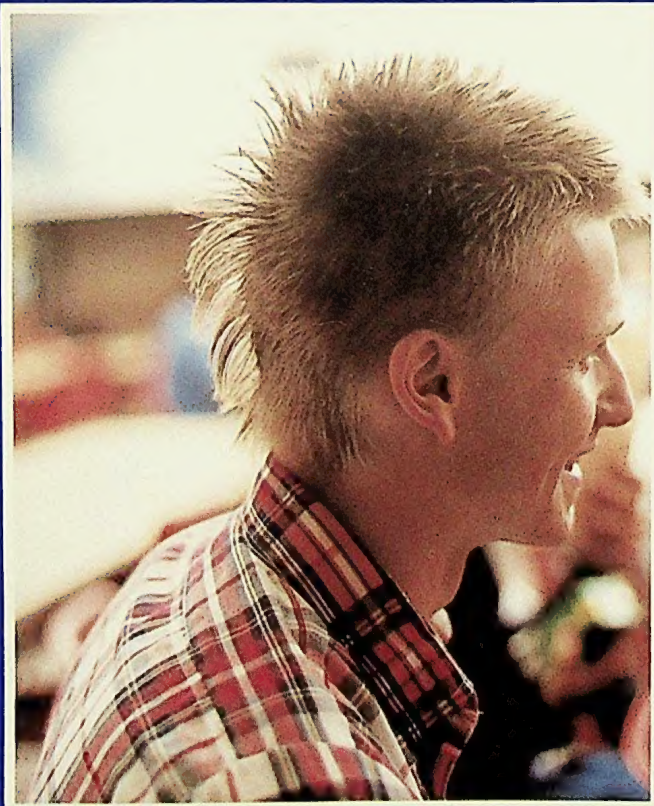

Rob Sorenson

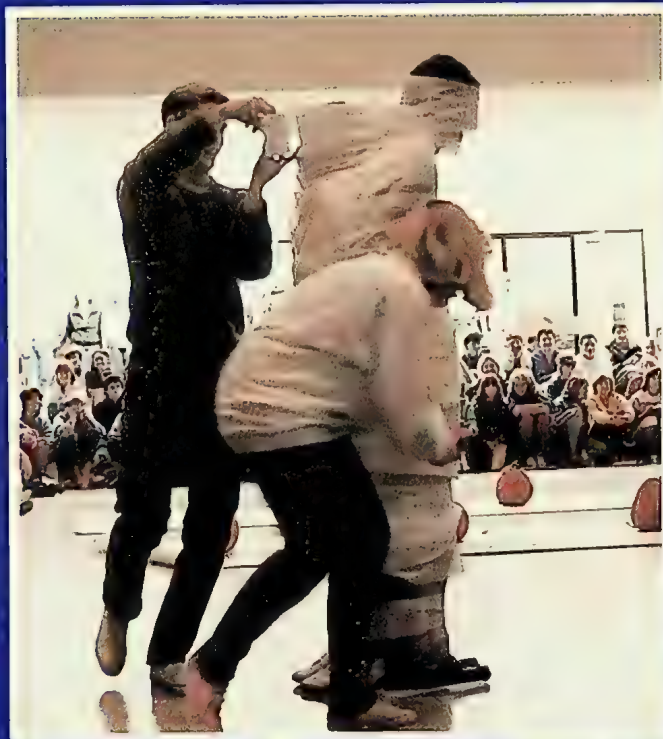

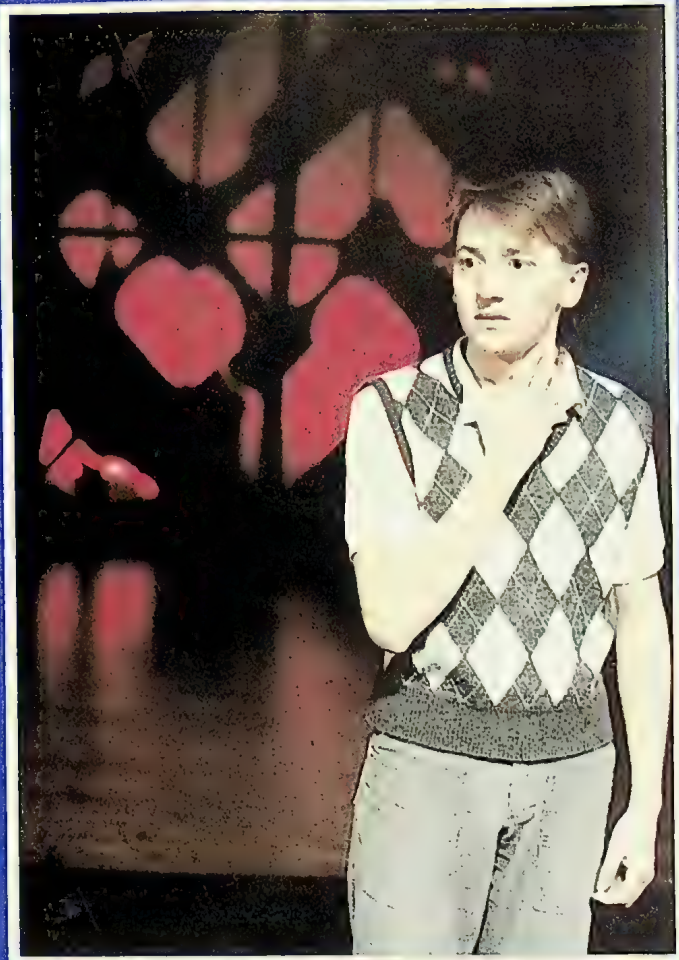

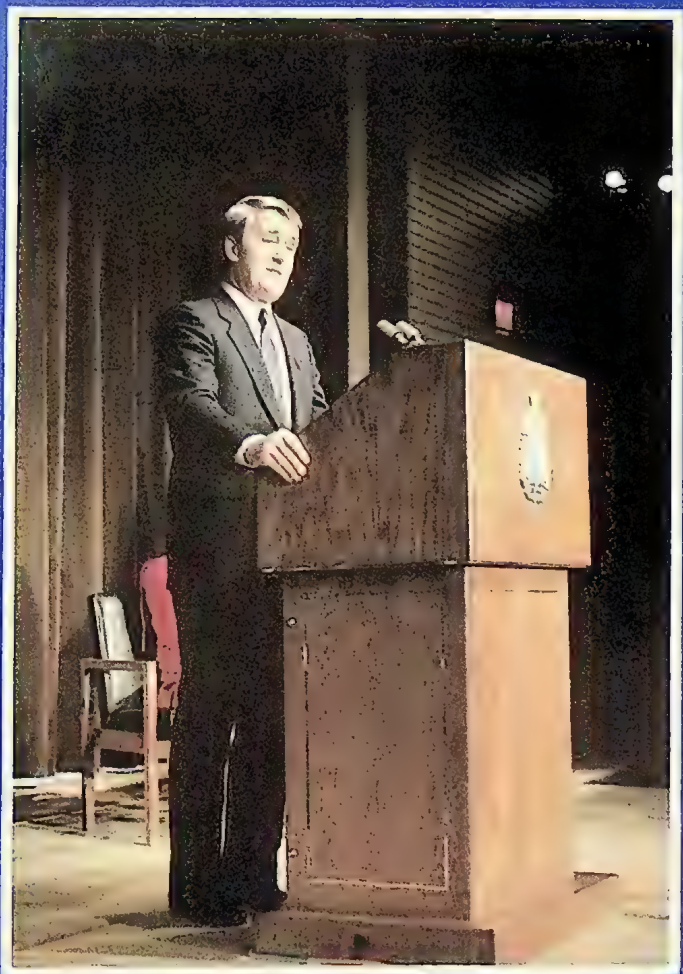

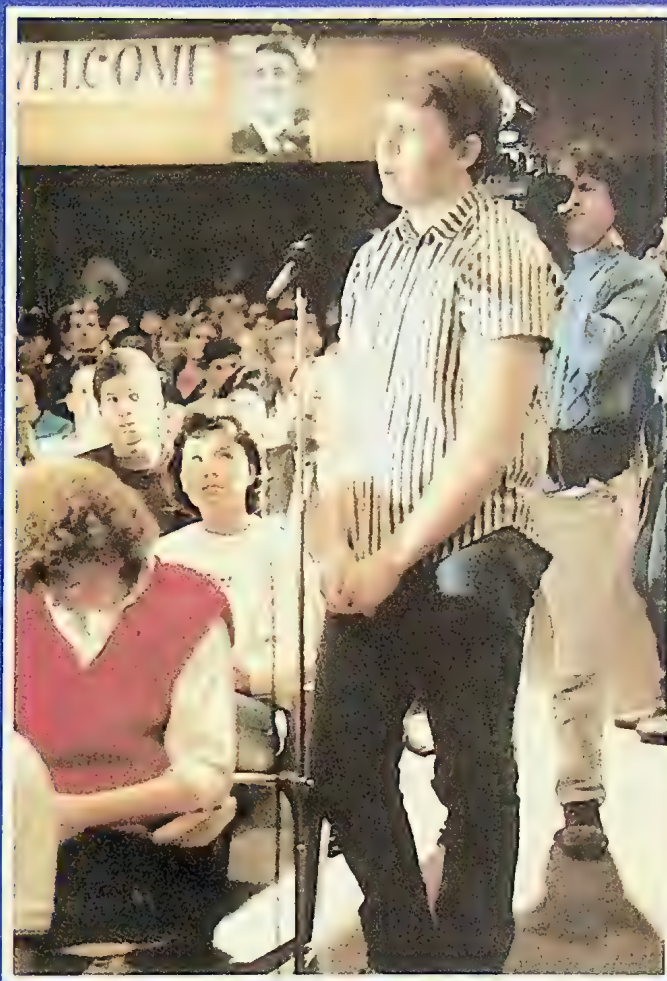

FACULTY

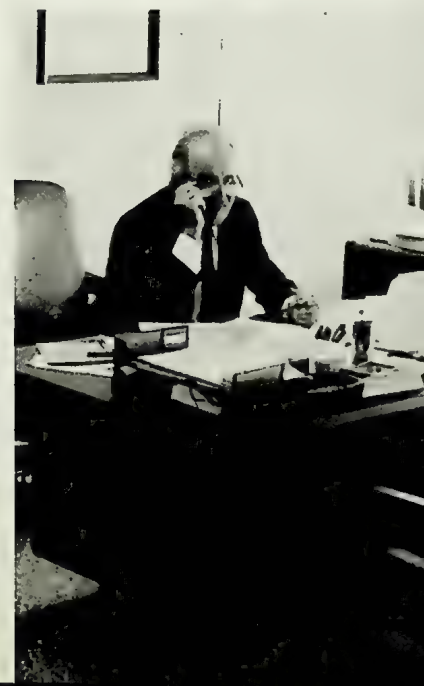

The graduates of 1986 will long remember their commencement year. It was a year in which many of you met your individual goals regarding your preparation for further studies and future endeavors, and a year in which you brought honor and distinction to our school through your individual and collective accomplishments.

It was also a year which we will all remember with sadness because of the passing of Ray Webb, a teacher who embodied the true essence of Harry Ainlay Composite High School. Mr. Webb believed that Harry Ainlay School was a place of people and a place for people. It is my hope that each graduate has developed the same qualities that were exemplified by Ray Webb: a love for life; a love for fellow man; a love for learning.

Good luck to the members of the 1986 graduating class. I trust that you will remember your years at Harry Ainlay as the cornerstone of your future.

CLUBS

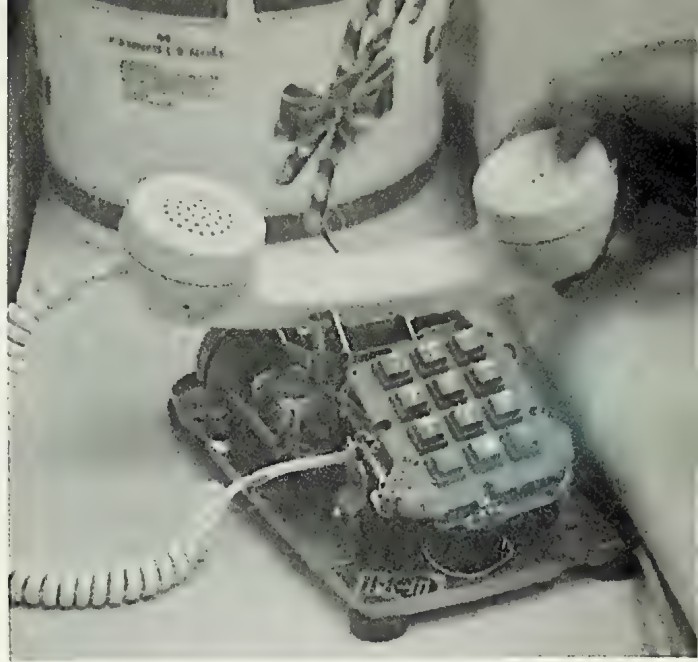

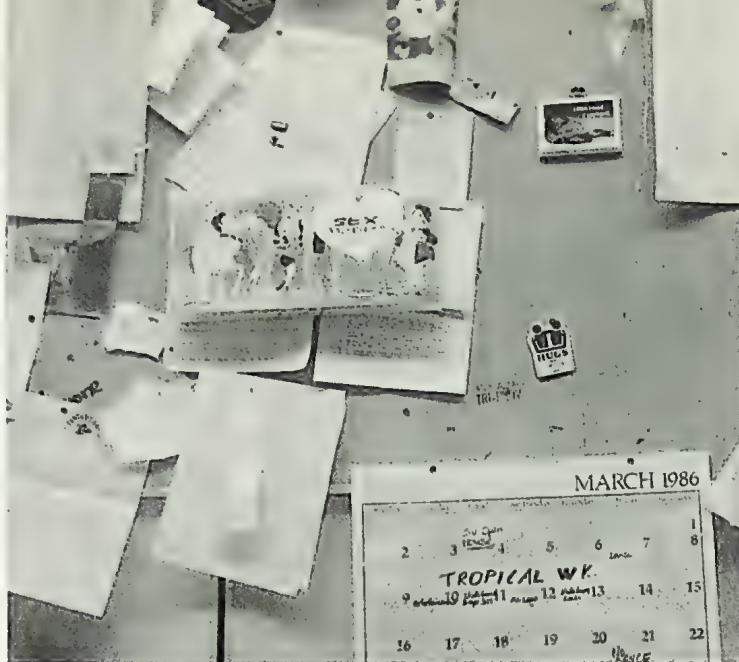

This is a small poem to remember these days of high school and what is in store for us in the upcoming years. all names are fictitious and there should be no conclusions drawn from this poetic

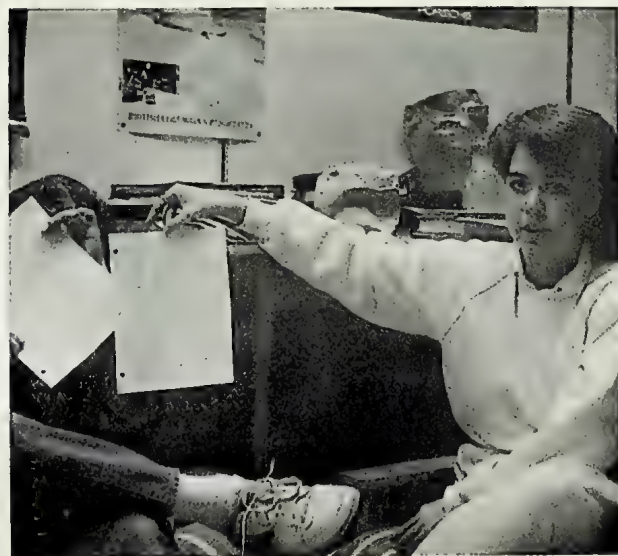

*After three years we deserve a rest
It was a great time, the very best
But now it's time, we must move on
High school was fun but it's over and gone
Some of us will go to the U of A
Others just plan to sunbathe their lives away
One who wants to be a big rock star
For now he must learn to play the guitar*

*One is heading DOWN UNDER for a year
In the soft summer rain drinking warm beer
One scowls the country for a rich man
One makes new computers for sony in japan
One tries to find herself in the armed forces then quits before she ends up with other corps
One works hard and enrolls in pre-med
One cleans and washes sheets for the beds
One goes on to be a biology teacher
One goes on to be a church preacher
One goes on from the very start
One continues to be, even as we part
It is so important that we realize
There is no set direction, infinite as the skies
In the end, when we have gone our own way
We may meet back here some ten years from this day*

Lorne's message:

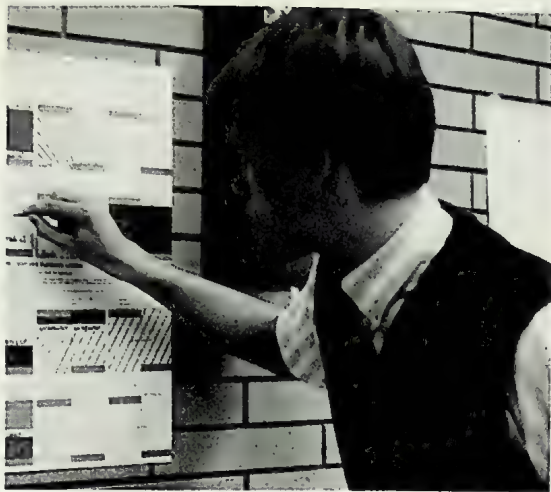

When I undertook the position of graduation council president, I never realized what I was getting myself into. I mean all we had to do was sell some strawberry shortcake, do a couple of bottle drives and presto: graduation would be ready. Well it took approximately two days of Mr. Hinz for me to realize that there was a lot more to this than fund raising. However, I was fortunate to work with eight dedicated executive members and twenty-five council members whose endless hours of effort have made my job an easy and enjoyable one. Thank-You.

For you graduates, if it is now September 1986, and graduation is just a memory, hopefully you will look back on the graduation ceremonies as the culmination of your years at Harry Ainlay; and remember it as an enjoyable and worthwhile experience. However, high school is now over (for most of us) and gone is the security of Harry Ainlay. We now face the challenges of the "real world". Whether your goals be university, travel, or a job, I am sure that through hard work and dedication, you will be able to achieve success and happiness. I wish you all the best of luck in the future!

Christmas is the time of year for eating oranges and drinking beer.
 Earboo meetings and layouts too make us feel like we're trapped in the zoo.
 Fuzzy pictures and many lost mugs
 maybe the earboo is full of thugs.
 Absolute deadlines and 3 weeks at a glance serve one purpose: our lives to enhance.
 Our filing system is a mess
 to find any picture you just have to guess.
 Leslie's fingers running through Drew's thick hair no wonder he forgets his lunch tupperware.
 Simon & Garfunkel and even U2
 give a working atmosphere to this industrious oo.
 Albert offers a Bronto-burger
 teachers on fucia--a prevented merger.
 The grade 10 and 11 editors including M. Junk come look at pictures to find themselves a hunk.
 Poor Elizabeth Seale with nothing to do comes to be with _____ (it rhymes with grew).
 Lance and Melanie shout "Put out that fire!"
 OH, NERTZ! Burnt rubber cement we don't require.
 Ben and his glasses nowhere to be seen such responsibility; he's only seventeen.
 The color section representing the theme we'll get it done although this may not seem.
 Ken and Mr. Mathew think alike
 if we get this done, it will be done in spite (of).
 Upside down pictures and Asha's wall
 when it gets better just give us a call.
 What else can we say on a subject SO dear except MERRY CHRISTMAS and a HAPPY NEW YEAR!!!

Quotes from the Titanic staff 1985-1986

"Oh it's been great fun ..." mumbled by Cathy West, co-editor

"Power ... I love it!" Andy Nuttall, co-editor

"What?" Ken Bikow.

Don Wall just smiled and shrugged his shoulders.

"Is this really a newspaper? I want to say more." Ken Bikow again.

To sum it all up ... the year was o.k. There were a few major changes to the format, attitude, and staff. More sports, editorials, student input and staff input. We all had a great time. We also enjoyed moving into the Titanic office and partying there.

We hope that the Titanic kept you entertained throughout the year. We enjoyed working every month so that you could have something to keep you informed, and possibly make you proud of your high school year.

GERMAN EXCHANGE

To all the great people of Harry Ainlay,

When it was time to leave Canada, we couldn't believe that our stay was already over--we had such a great time! We enjoyed being in your country so much, that we didn't want to go back to Germany any more. Everyone was so nice to us and made us enjoy our visit--we want to thank you for that!

"Thank you" to all the friends we made, to all the teachers who welcomed us into their classes and to everyone else who helped us during our stay.

And finally we thank our exchange partners and their families for receiving us with that much hospitality, warmth and love which made us feel at home.

Vielen Dank fuer alles! Wir werden diesen Austausch nie vergessin.

We miss you!

Luv ya!

TVT

These two committees dedicated hours after hours of hard work in order to present two professionally organized sport tournaments, each only lasted three days. Congratulations for a job well done!

DEBATE AND SPEECH CLUB

The Debate and Speech Club almost doubled its membership this year, and it showed. Teams were entered in several competitions, including the regional finals and several University debates.

The club's mascot this year was a musical clown, which travelled to, among other places, the Provincial Parliamentary Debates. We saw some fantastic speaking and made lots of friends from all over the province.

Plan for next year: to double the number of people who compete to have a representative at the Nationals.

MATH CLUB

The Math Club meets every Tuesday with Mr. Hunka and Ms. Mowat. During the year, its members spend their time playing math games and preparing for math contests. Because of the devotion of these students, Harry Ainlay has once again placed very well in Canada for its accomplishments in the math contests.

BOOKSTORE STAFF

SECOND ROW: Harpal Minhas, James Fennema, Jennifer Watt, Laura McClung, Linda Hoecherl, Tammy Legrange. THIRD ROW: Mrs. G. Becker, Rob Nakashima, John MacKenzie, Loree Lehanky, Lisa Hogel, Heath Olson, Mickey Fazio, Lisa Achen, Mrs. T. Harder. MISSING: Danny Fawcett, Cathy Stretch, Michelle Ziegler, Lori Woroschuk, Glen Campbell, Mike Gratton.

The Bookstore had another busy but successful year. Many thanks to Mrs. Becker and the students involved for the long hours and hard work that they put into the store. Without these people, pop and potato chips would no longer be a regular meal for a lot of Ainlay students.

POTTERY CLUB

The Pottery Club met to satisfy their creative urges, every Wednesday noon hour, under the astute direction of Mr. D. Miller.

VIDEO YEARBOOK AND AV CLUB

This year, the Video Yearbook recorded numerous activities within the school. Spirit Week, T.V.T., Tri-Prov, and the Prime Minister's visit were just some of the events that the club filmed. Don't be surprised if you appear on one of their tapes!

YOUTH FOR PEACE

The club meets occasionally. During the year, they had the school declared a Nuclear Free Zone, by decision of school vote.

AWARDS BOARD

The Awards Board consists of three committees: Publicity, Programs, and Stage Arrangements. Together, these groups of members are responsible for organizing the Annual Awards Ceremonies. Special thanks to Mr. Holzer, Mrs. McGeachy, Mrs. Newbold, and Mrs. Tuffs, whose time and effort are deeply appreciated.

BAMFIELD MARINE

On the morning of Oct. 31, 1985 20 HACHS students, led by a courageous pair of teachers: Mr. Wynn and Mrs. Slevinsky, left Edmonton bound for Bamfield Marine Station. After landing in Vancouver we drove to the ferry only getting lost once enroute. Eventually, after an unplanned scenic tour of Nanaimo, we made it to Bamfield.

Mix together hikes through the rainforest, trips on the trawler, and voyages on the herring skiff; liberally sprinkle with stints in the lab and bouts of seasickness; season well with continuous rainfall and lots of good friends and you have a recipe for an excellent trip. Some of the highlights included a homegrown fireworks display, a night visit to a tidal cave, and a brisk walk along the West Coast Trail. All too soon though the trip was over.

The journey home was not as exciting to a group of now experienced travelers as the trip out. Our pink flamingo mascot Vinnie kept our spirits up until we made it home. A trip that we will all remember for a long time to come.

EUROPE TRIP

Dateline: West Germany March 21, 1986 Twenty-five HACHS students and two teachers invaded West Berlin. Efforts were made to hold them at the customs desk but to no avail. And so began 13 days of fun and frolic through central Europe.

From West Berlin we crossed 'Check Point Charlie' into East Berlin for a day of being appalled at the most striking differences between east and west anywhere. Over to Prague, Czechoslovakia for two days and nights in one of the most beautiful cities in central Europe (some of us missed it!). Leaving Prague by bus for Budapest, Hungary, for the last two of our four days and nights behind the Iron Curtain.

From Budapest it was all downhill with five days in Austria travelling through Vienna, Salzburg and Innsbruck. Our tour company's representative Bob Eigen assailed our ears with tales of Austria's Imperial past and examples of music from a bygone era. We wrapped up our trip in Munich, West Germany with such educational activities as throwing paper airplanes off the Olympic T.V. Tower. Then off into the wild blue yonder for an 11 hour flight home and two days of recovery before hitting the same ol' grind. Central Europe will never be the same again.

The '85-'86 Titans consisted of the "Dynamic Duo and the guys". The tandem of 6'8" Brian Halsey and 5'11" Lorne Blatt were the scoring giants. The "guys", consisting of Scott Quilliam, Peter Rowe, Gus Mount, and Rob McKinnon played their roles well.

The team has won the prestigious Edmonton CAHPHER Tournament, finished second to a tough Seattle team in the Centennial Invitational in Coquitlam, B.C., Second in the L.C.I. Tournament Second in Edmonton, Tri-Prov Champions, and Fourth in Alberta.

SENIOR BOYS' BASKETBALL

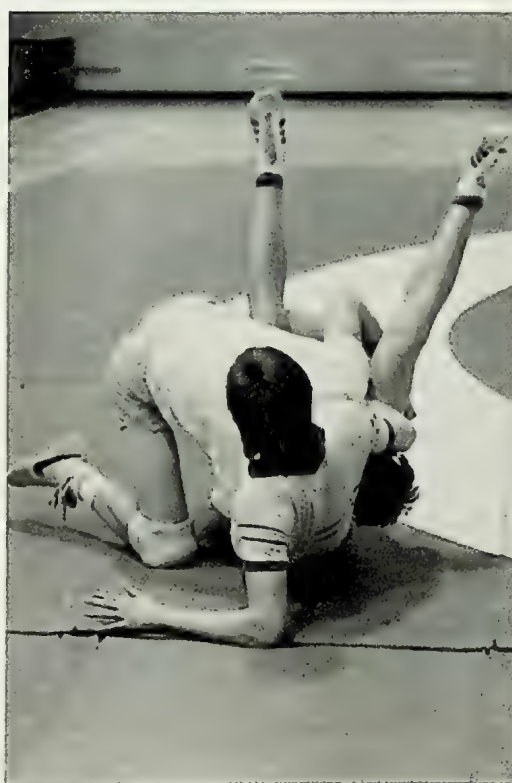

For the second year in a row, Ainlay Titans captured the Senior Boys crown in the Tri-Prov. Basketball Tournament held at Ainlay Feb. 13-15th 1986. The Titans defeated the Mennonite Eagles in a Saturday night final. The final score being 85-84. The Ainlay Titans Senior girls' team lost a close game to Sir Winston Churchill from Calgary. The Ainlay Junior Boys easily won all of their games and regained the crown by defeating Holy Cross, 67-48. Another successful tournament was put on by the 16 executives and their assistants, headed by Lois Sim, Student Chairperson, with Mr. Hignell as tournament director, the tournament was organized in just four months.

The 1986 season started slowly but mid-season we won the last 3 games to finish in 4th place in the standings. The semi-final game was played against Ross Sheppard. We rose to the occasion and defeated them by a score of 24-15, which put us into the City Championship final against Salisbury, in which we unfortunately came up short and lost the game by 4 points. Coaches Legg and Erichsen considered the season a successful one, and believe players like Jamie Peers, Scott Craig, Stephen Jukes, and others will help greatly in the coming season.

The Titan rugby team finished in third place after a slow start which saw them lose their first two games, and end up in the semi-finals. They were winning until the sixty-fifth minute. This primarily Grade Eleven team has good prospects for next year.

This team has gone further in city championships than any other Ainlay girls' team. With strong balance of Grade 10's (including entire forward line) they will continue to do so well in the next 2 years.

JUNIOR BOYS' SOCCER

SITTING: (1)Ben Eyton, (2)Neil Sande, (3)Russ Wells, (4)Ed Figueroa, (5)Chris Veale, (6)Iggy Astete. STANDING: (7)Eric Gonzales, (8)Howard Goldstein, (9)Trevor Noon, (10)Tim Christopherson, (11)Greg Janzen, (12)Dave Mabbot, (13)Charles Quinteros, (14)Steve Ozar.

SENIOR BOYS' SOCCER

It has been a very successful season. The team is presently in the playoffs and anticipates to finish well. The key to Ainlay's success has been the outstanding play of the Strikers; Carey Symonds (11 goals), Neil Sande (9 goals), and Ben Eyton (7 goals).

Pleasant surprises have been the play of goal keeper Howard Goldstein and the steady mid-field effort of Ed Figueroa.

TRACK AND FIELD

This year's track team has come closer to winning the city championships than it has in fifteen years. In the divisional meet they came within thirty points of defeating the Scona Lords. In the city meet, they came almost as close, with J.P. a close third. The provincial meet took place on the seventh of June at Bev Facey High School.

One Man Before The Heavens

In the faded twilight of the bow lounge, empty at this time, the captain sat. Alone, he listened to Vivaldi.

He sat gazing at the stars glittering past in front of him. The windows of the lounge went from the floor underfoot to the ceiling, eight meters above. Spring faded, danced in his mind and glided off amongst the stars.

He sat, surrounded by the splendour of the blood-red carpet and soft-cushioned chairs that were scattered about the huge complex of his oracle, the bow recreation area, more specifically, the dim light in the lounge. He had no troubles to deal with, no crosses to bear, he was just a man in front of the heavens.

Someone entered to clean the lounge. They carried a tray and a rag. Some tasks had still not been automated. It's alright, he mused and then contemplated, that man had not overcome all of the simple problems, being left with only the massive thought consuming tasks that devoured so much of his time. 'His', he pondered, did 'his' really mean all of mankind, or just himself. No matter, no difference. Right now, shaded by his tree, he was safe from the timeless vacuum that engulfed the universe and absorbed the blinding light of the stars.

Sapphire was left for him by his ancestors. No gold or rubies, silver or bronze. Diamonds were manufactured, and so was food. Blood stained only the shafts of light that shoot off into the vacuum, lonely and infinite. Birds still chirped in the bazares and shopping malls of humans past.

Fall disappeared, and so did he, drifting off for half an hour, to be awakened by his dreams.

Choking, he felt he was alone in a time for giving and receiving gifts with those one loves. There were no gods there to believe in. His ship was the only god that existed; Zeus, Buddah, king of all gods.

Where had the adventure he had dreamed of as a boy gone? Old Ireland, without religion to split it, was now just a place on a planet suited for living on, although just barely. The fog that lifted from the fields of his mountainous home entered his mind and sent him off to visualize a boyish medieval adventure. But he only embraced the image and the feeling, and no tale of ancient wars and nobility past their way into his consciousness from his hollow, resonant heart. He tried not to think, instead he concentrated on his visualization to replace the colour-shifted stars that roamed in his peripheral conscience.

The clink of two scotch glasses aroused him from his waking dream. Again the altered stars sailed by, stopping in his own mind, to show their inhabitant's globes and then dash away again to catch up with the rest.

He looked for a moment, an empty ultramodern barstool held no appeal.

There would have been snow in Ireland. Tonight the fog would roll in and the rain would come to wipe away the teardrops of snow, and in the morning the sun would come to parch the gravel roads and snatch the moisture from his soul.

Sleep appealed, and he attempted to doze. He wished there was a god for sleep who would grant him cessation from thought and end his reminiscing. He tried to die in his fear, but the mind and body rejected the concept of solar breakdown, he just sat. No tears, no smile, and no motion. The stars almost stopped.

He was too engrossed to sense the footsteps behind him, or the chair that was dragged up and sat on. He was unaware that his brow and chin were being admired. He awoke to the softness of lips pressed to forehead, and the feel of gentle hands on his cheeks.

The stars were gone. The Vivaldi no longer relaxed him. The barstool had been tidied and placed in line with all the others. Old Ireland, misty and unsanctified lay in the past; nobility dead and wars no longer fought wearing male. No jewels for the king, no lightening from Zeus, and no blessing from Buddah.

He was no longer a man before the heavens, alone.

...spring faded,
danced in his mind
and glided off
amongst the stars.

Night rise
Sky fall
Drifting Soft

Who will watch me burn?

Who'll light the fire?
Who'll bring the marshmallows?

All alone
returned to earth
and knew it was my tomb

ART/PHILOSOPHY QUESTION #1

A PAINT FACTORY IN THE CITY SUDDENLY EXPLODES, HURTLING THOUSANDS OF GALLONS OF MULTICOLORED PAINT INTO THE ATMOSPHERE. A MILE AWAY IN THE COUNTRY, AN ARTIST IS PREPARING TO PAINT A LANDSCAPE. JUST AS HE SETS HIS WHITE CANVAS ON THE EASEL, A WAVE OF THE ESCAPED PAINT TOFFLES HIM TO THE GROUND. WHEN HE PICKS HIMSELF UP, HE SEES THAT BY CHANCE THE PAINT FORMED AN EXACT DUPLICATE OF THE MONA LISA ON HIS CANVAS. IS IT ART?

A charcoal or pencil drawing of a flock of birds in flight. The birds are depicted with simple, dark outlines and some internal shading to suggest feathers. They are scattered across the page, mostly in the lower half, with some flying towards the left and others towards the right. The background is a complex, layered texture of dark and light grey, with some areas appearing more solid and others more open, creating a sense of depth and movement. The overall style is expressive and somewhat abstract.

I wish I could fly like a bird and

I was not ready for the fall

If I ran away

I wouldn't have the strength to go very far

How will they hear

The truth is never far behind

You kept it hidden well

CLASS HISTORIANS OF 1985-86

Jason Alderman
Rod Girard
Morris Maduro
Andy Nuttall
Gerald Sterzik
Elin Werth

Lorne Blatt : Ladies and gentlemen, Gerald Sterzik.

Gerald : (plays "Chariots of Fire" theme on Casio).

Morris : (enters, does beat by mouth, and is followed by Elin with triangle).

Andy & Jason : (enter, running slowly from opposite directions on the stage and meeting in the middle as the music ends).

Jason : Good evening, I'm Jason Alderman, one of your class historians. It's been a long road and we're just about at that finish line. And it all started many years ago, as our parents sent us off to kindergarten...

Rod : (interrupts) Excuse me Jason... Sorry, Agrell sent me out here. He said you guys are too uptight. Relax a little bit. Who could be serious after listening to Lorne Blatt sing the national anthem? Those are our friends, our comrades; After all, we have gone to school with them for the last three years.

Andy : We passed, we failed...

Morris : We laughed, we cried...

Elin : We experienced cafeteria food with them!

Andy : But we all made it, didn't we?

Morris : Yeah, three years of announcements, tests, long registration lines...

ALL : Mr. Stolee!

Elin : And the ritualistic inauguration of the grade tens: froshing!

Rod : Yeah, I alone got froshed three times in grade ten.

Gerald : I got froshed three times in grade twelve.

Jason : I didn't get froshed at all. That's because I was always looking for my classes.

Andy : Looking for classes? I was always trying to avoid them!

Morris : Don't you all remember skipping for the very first time?

Elin : And the second, and the third, fourth, fifth...

Gerald : And whammo! You're on commitment.

Rod : But it was cool to skip.

Jason : Yeah, we all had to be accepted.

Gerald : After all, there were only about two thousand five hundred people.

Andy : No wonder we were all lost.

Morris : And as if we didn't have enough trouble meeting people without them having ten thousand watts of techno-pop syntho droid music pumped into their ears.

Elin : And if you didn't have a walkman, then you had a digital watch that sang to you.

Gerald : Or perhaps yours had a calculator.

Rod : Or maybe a T.V.!

Jason : But as cluttered as they may have been, at least they told us the time.

Andy : Which is now outdated in a watch.

Morris : yeah, now we have the Swatches!

Elin : They're pretty...

Gerald : Smell nice...

Rod : Very small and streamline...

Jason : Protected by small plastic guards.

Morris : But I'll be damned if you can read the time from them!

Andy : And of course we were all baffled at the prospect of having to learn how to use the personal computer.

Elin : By the time we learned how to work the things, all the features could be purchased on the watch.

Morris : No wonder we were intimidated. We couldn't understand the people, much less the machinery.

Rod : We were just trying to become popular.

Jason : And then there was our big chance: the first dance.

Gerald : Seven hundred and fifty screaming lunatics...

Jason : Bopping to the beat of the Police, David Bowie; And who can forget Trio?

Gerald : (Beat to "Da Da Da" on Casio)

Elin : What you do and what you don't...

Jason : Aha!

Rod : What you will and what you won't...

Jason : Aha!

Elin : What you can and what you can't...

Jason : Aha!

Rod : This is what you've got to know?

Morris : Da da da!

Andy : (Cuts off) Mind you, we were all too cool to dance.

Morris : Yeah! We might...sweat!

Elin : Or mess our hair!

Rod : Yeah, we were either worried about how we looked, or else we were in the bathroom talking to the porcelain god.

Jason : Yeah, sure, you think it's funny! But I worked on the Students' Union for three years cleaning up after you until four in the morning, you, you...

Gerald : Oh, is that how long it took you to put the furniture together?

Morris : Yeah, with all your sitting around, you needed something soft to lie on.

Andy : However, we made it to the first relay point, and started the second round.

Gerald : (Plays "Chariots of Fire")

Rod : (Interrupting) But luckily grade eleven had a whole new pace.

Gerald : (Speeds up on Casio)

Morris : We weren't on the bottom.

Elin : But we weren't on the top, either.

Jason : We had a new attitude, sort of.

Gerald : We even had a new image, thanks to W5.

Andy : Yes, but we began to take an interest in our surroundings and figure out what was really going on.

Morris : Right. For instance, the announcements.

ALL : Always the same!

Rod : (giggles, and the others join in).

Elin : Good morning Harry Ainlay, and these are your Tuesday morning announcements.

Andy : (in Mr. Stolee's voice) Excuse me, excuse me, girls...

Elin : (giggling) Oh Mr. Stolee!!

Andy : (stuttering) Would any grade twelve girl named Leanne please come down to the main office...I think her name was Leanne...

Jason : But no announcement would be complete without the stirring words of Mr. Nicholson.

Morris : (as Mr. Nicholson) Good morning, staff and students...As we transcend the commencement of...(mumbles)...Have a nice day!

Elin : Thank you, Harry Ainlay, these have been your (everyone says a different day) morning announcements.

Gerald : We also found our personal niche.

Andy : I found the Titanic office...

Jason : And I found the Students' Union...

Morris : I was abducted by the I.B. program...

Elin : And I found the Men's Locker Room!

Rod : And I discovered the drama room.

Jason : You're a drama person?

Rod : No, I'm a Students' Union fag! Hey...at least we weren't volleyball players. (all make gestures of agreement)

Gerald : I feel sorry for them. No one could possibly be as good as they think they are.

Morris : Regardless of what we chose, though, we all needed the safety blanket of our peer group.

Andy : Along with falling into the clicks, we also learned about the fashions.

Gerald : (In Spicoli voice) Like, Ocean Pacific and Bermuda shorts!

Elin : Neons and stirrup pants!

Jason : Polo and Paisley!

Rod : (stroking his face) The Don Johnson six o'clock shadow.

Morris : Which took us three weeks to grow!

Andy : All of this was foreplay to becoming a model Yuppie.

Gerald : Harry Ainlay, the high school Yuppie capital of the world.

Elin : And where would a Yuppie be without a cause?

Jason : We found out we were the world...

Rod : That tears were not enough...

Morris : And if we lived to see another Christmastime,

Andy : We'd never play Sun City!

Gerald : As Yuppies, we took a new interest in global affairs.

Elin : We all watched the fine, outstanding work of people like Bob Geldof...

Jason : Bishop Desmond Tutu...

Rod : Lech Walesa...

Morris : Mother Theresa.

Andy : And when it came time for us to contribute, we couldn't even fill four shopping bags for the Christmas hamper.

Gerald : But when the real issue came to pass, we banded together.

Elin : It was all for one and one for all!

Jason : There was no way we were going to let those tasteless Americans change our Coke formula.

Andy : When we needed refuge from the problems of the world, the rotunda was our sanctuary.

Gerald : That's right. The rotunda. That microcosm of the greater Harry Ainlay populus.

Elin : More like the world's largest indoor garbage dump.

Jason : But the rotunda ecologists are going to change all that.

Rod : Yeah. Thanks to Harry Ainlay's own David Suzuki. Mr. Jenkins, on November six, we began to clean up our act.

Gerald : Three days later, we had empirically determined that we had gone from fifty-four to six on the junkometer.

Andy : But what was grade eleven really like?

Morris : It was kind of like grade twelve but without grad...

Elin : Like a cafeteria without fries...

Rod : Like a bookstore without gum...

Jason : A school without windows!

Gerald : I don't know what it was, but we sure were missing something.

Andy : We missed enough classes!

Elin : Of course we missed a lot of class. We were being groomed for the eventual leadership of the school.

Rod : The passing on of the knowledge that was a natural evolutionary move toward superiority.

ALL : What?

Rod : And we made it.

Morris : We began our last heat.

Gerald : ("Chariots of Fire" on Casio)

Andy : No, no! Our final adventure! (Starts "Indiana Jones" theme, others join in.)

Elin : And now in grade twelve we took new interest in our final year.

Rod : The year we decided to bear down...

Jason : Show some responsibility...

Morris : Actually do our homework...

Gerald : Not just pass, but excel in school.

Andy : Take pride in ourselves and our school.

Elin : We even declared Harry Ainlay a nuclear free zone.

Rod : We even brought in Brian and Mila.

Morris : (in Reagan's voice) Well, I am very happy to be here today. Hell, at my age, I'm happy to be anywhere.

Jason : No, that's Reagan.

Gerald : Same difference.

Rod : But now we really are on top.

Elin : We had spares and we didn't have to skip.

Andy : But we did anyways!

Jason : And why not? We were in control and we knew what we were doing.

Gerald : At least we thought we did, until mid-term marks came back.

Andy : So we decided to bear down, again.

Morris : But then we turned eighteen...

Elin : And discovered Goose Loonies!

Rod : Denny Andrews!

ALL : Our Place!

Jason : But it wasn't all work.

Gerald : In between we found time to play.

Andy : There was tropical week, spring week...

Morris : And getting ready for Grad.

Elin : Yeah, finding a Grad date.

Rod : Someone who epitomizes the perfect mate to accompany you to your final high school rite of passage.

Jason : Taking your mom, eh Rod?

Andy : Actually, I don't have a date.

Morris : That doesn't surprise me.

Andy : Well, I'm taking yours to after-grad.

Gerald : And that's what we've all been waiting for.

Elin : Yeah, after-grad and parties, the only real incentive to get through high school.

Rod : No, that's not it at all. It was more than that. It was making new friends.

Jason : And receiving that ever-so-important education, that prepared us for the real world.

Gerald : Right-not just reading, writing, and arithmetic.

Andy : But learning to take responsibility for ourselves.

Morris : And to gain that responsibility we had to learn to deal with our parents.

Elin : Our parents, the wonderful people who were always there in our time of need.

Rod : When we needed the car for the big date.

Jason : When we needed money for the big date.

Gerald : When we needed the date for the big date.

Andy : Our parents, the people who made us not only answer to them, but most importantly to ourselves.

Morris : And when we managed to duck our parents, the teachers were there to put us back in line.

Elin : Teachers that really cared.

Rod : Showed concern for us as students and as human beings.

Jason : And when we really got out of line, we were suspended by an administration that also cared.

Gerald : But hey, a quick plea of innocence to our coordinators, and things were quickly resolved.

Andy : (Sprach Zarathustra, music from 2001, begins) And on we went for three years...

Morris : Achieving national musical superiority...

Elin : Total domination on the football field...

Rod : And on the basketball court...

Jason : And on the volleyball floor...

Gerald : And at play festivals...

Jason : Crushing the Louis St. Laurent hockey team...

Rod : Breaking new sound barriers during Air Guitar...

Elin : New highs in the mister legs contest...

Gerald : And new lows in the Grad Fashion Show.

Morris : Have we really done all that?

Andy : Yeah, and a whole lot more!

Morris : Yes, Harry Ainlay, we can be proud! We have conquered the academic mountain!

Andy : We swam the scholastic ocean!

Elin : We've boldly went where no school has gone before!

Rod : We've journeyed to distant and dangerous classes, and we gather here tonight to congratulate ourselves and to unite as one!!

ALL : Stand up, Harry Ainlay!! This is your moment!! (All turn around to reveal the letters A-I-N-L-A-Y, they link hands and raise them. Elin places "L" on Gerald's chest. All turn around, bow, and exit. Gerald follows soon after.)

VALEDICTORIAN

Parents, faculty, and most of all, fellow graduates of 1986 - I salute you! Graduates, at this point in our lives it is only fitting that we congratulate ourselves and each other. Perhaps for some graduating has been more of a struggle than for others, but tonight, we step forward as equals to receive diplomas that state one all-important thing: that we are the grads of '86.

In addition to pride, we are also filled with warm feelings when we think back to the good times we've shared at Ainlay. Of course, along with the good times there were the inevitable unhappy ones as well, but even these were of value to us, for through them we came to learn valuable lessons about ourselves. On behalf of the graduating class of 1986, I would like to thank those who helped us profit from both the good times and the bad: first, our teachers; and secondly, our parents, who, by the way, were blessed with our presence for all our lives, not just the three precious years our teachers enjoyed.

Graduation, however, is a time for looking forward as well as back. Even while we savor this moment, we must turn our thoughts ahead to speculate on just what the future has in store for us. And so, graduates, before you start feeling just a little complacent, remember that whatever you get in that world out there, whatever ambition you fulfill, whatever good that you do, you are going to have to fight for it. Nothing is going to come easy in this world we have inherited and must somehow make sense of. Frankly, the future that waits for us could well be a bleak and frightening one, if we allow it to be so. Upon leaving the protective shell of high school and home, we will be rapidly coming face to face with some very ugly problems. For example, while governments zealously spend billions of dollars on constructing new ways for men to kill each other, east-west tensions continue to grow, making the threat of man's extinction an all too real one. Terrorists cast a long shadow of fear and anxiety, but when nations attempt to fight back the line between aggressor and victim becomes less and less defined. Violence, in fact, is so common in our world that it has become an accepted norm; ours is a society of Rambo-dolls. Overall, the greed, self-interest, and ignorance of each nation is dividing the world into ideological and military battle zones. Neutral organizations working to establish a peace that perhaps never existed often appear pitifully ill-equipped to cool the fires of conflict that threaten to consume us all. As well, a disparity that borders on the obscene exists between the developed and underdeveloped nations of the world: while we scrape our leftovers into garburators and ponder which new diet to attempt, inconceivable millions starve. The environment is being so casually defaced that soon the blemishes will become scars. And despite today's talk of an oil glut, our natural resources are inexorably running out.

Now, we've all heard of these problems before, yet it often seems nothing much really gets done about them. The trouble is that because these problems do not immediately touch us, they do not appear urgent. Thus it is all too easy to dismiss them and continue on with our lives as if they did not exist. These ills, however, are not going to go away. We cannot afford to ignore them, for if we do, rest assured that soon enough they will be touching us, and if not us, our children, or their children. We must have the foresight to realize the responsibility we owe to the future.

One problem that perhaps hits closer to home is the fact that Canada, irrefutably one of the wealthiest countries in the world, has become a nation of line-ups for the food bank. The implications of this are very real to we graduates who will soon be entering the work force, for now neither a high school diploma or even a university degree automatically serves as a guarantee for a job.

Our parents can tell us that many of these problems are not new: thus they tend to take on the aura of being perpetual and completely unassailable.

Well, now that I've managed to be a perfect drag and dampened your spirits, please let me raise them again. I have reminded you of the difficulties we face to impress upon you the need for change, not to give you the impression that change is impossible. There is one vital reason to have hope that our future will be a good one, and this is the power that exists within each and every one of us. We are the force that can ensure that the world we live in today will be a better one tomorrow. We can make a difference, for as Robert F. Kennedy once said, "Let no one be discouraged by the belief that there is nothing one man or one woman can do against the enormous array of the world's ills--against misery and injustice, ignorance and violence ... few will have the greatness to bend history itself, but each of us can work to change a small portion of events, and in the total of all these acts will be written the history of this generation." Graduates, it lies within our power to be the authors of our generation; our voices raised in unison must be heard.

Too often, however, our voices are raised only in complaint or to make excuses. We preoccupy ourselves with the question: just who is responsible for this sad state of affairs? But even if an answer existed to that question, it would be irrelevant; enough time and energy has already been wasted on finger-pointing. Now is the time for action, not accusations.

Apathy is the greatest danger of our time, for apathy is what kills all desire to take a stand. We feel that we do not have to get involved, because somebody else is going to look after things. Thus, you do not act on our concern. Graduates, why should we wait for the other person to get involved when we know we have the ability and skill to do so ourselves?

Or, perhaps the problems seem so formidable, the barriers against positive progress so well fortified, that the situation seems hopeless. But graduates, we cannot give up; we cannot accept wrongs without twitching simply because they have existed for so long. If we never lose sight of our desire for change we will have the strength to continue, despite life's defeats along the way. The only true failure is the failure to even try.

Many instruments for change already exist; all that remains is for us to put them to use. As long as the list of problems is, the list of ways and means to do something about them is even longer. For example, write to your MP, write to the paper, or write a song. Join a group or start your own. Donate money to a cause or go out and collect the funds yourself. Use our democratic system to its full advantage; simply exercising your right to vote could make a difference. Learn as much as you can about the issues, then pass on your knowledge to others. As well, think up your own way of getting involved; have the creativity to set the trend. Whatever the cause, involvement is the key. Remember that each and every one of us has something special and unique to offer.

At first, you may find you stand alone, which is not an easy thing to do. But if you keep your determination and persevere despite this, you may find that you are joined by others who share the same ideals and dreams. By having the strength of conviction to step forward you will have encouraged others to do so, and the tiny ripple of hope you have created will have grown into a powerful wave of change.

Thus, I encourage you to act constructively when you see the need for positive change. Take what you have learned at Ainlay and the pride you gained there, and use it throughout your lives. Graduates, we are the hope of the future; we have the ability to hold it into one we can be proud of, and I wish you every success in doing so. Do not be frightened of the world out there, for although it is not perfect it is very new, very challenging, and very exciting. In closing, I would like to read a poem by O'Shaughnessy:

We are the music makers
We are the dreamers of dreams
Wandering by lone sea breakers
And sitting by desolate streams
World losers and world forsakers
On whom the pale moon gleams
We are the movers and shakers
Of the world, forever, it seems.

Graduates of 1986, be the movers and shakers of this generation! Thank you.
